

The S. Daniel Abraham Center for International and Regional Studies
The Sverdlin Institute for Latin American History and Culture
The Department of English and American Studies
The Sourasky Chair of Iberian Studies

The public is invited to a lecture by

Prof. David Sheinin

Dept. of History, Trent University on the topic:

How Juan Perón became a Friend of the Americans: The New Washington- Buenos Aires Axis, 1970-1975

From the late 1960s through the early 1970s, the U.S. government has been reasonably tied to a pro-dictatorship foreign policy in Latin America with special reference to Washington's role in the overthrow of Salvador Allende in Chile. However, In relations with Argentina -- through the brief final presidency of long-time pariah Juan Peron -- U.S. leaders and policy makers proved surprisingly accommodating and even welcoming of what had troubled them before September 1973 in Chile -- a strong shift to the "left" on dependency theory-inspired socio-economic policies all of which Washington hoped would bring stability to an increasingly chaotic Argentine polity.

Chair: Dr. Milette Shamir

Department of English and American Studies, Tel Aviv University

The event will take place on Wednesday, November 30 2011, at 18:00.

The Rosenberg building, room 212, Tel Aviv University.

(near the Museum of the Jewish Diaspora -Bet Hatefutsoth)

For further details, please contact the S. Daniel Abraham Center for International and Regional Studies, dacenter@post.tau.ac.il

Tel. 03-6406667/8 <http://www.tau.ac.il/humanities/abraham>

Free admission